A GOOD CAPTURE.

Three Burglars Captured in Delamar.

There were three persons, two men and a woman, made an attempt to rob the safe of J. Nesbitt & Bro at Delamar early Tuesday morning, and the parties were all captured. It appears that the plan to commit the robbery had been prepared some days ahead, but the men in Delamar were waiting for a woman, known as "Nell the Cowboy" claiming to be Hugh Monroe's wife, arrived. The lady reached Delamar Sunday evening with her little catch of explosives by the stage, when the time was set to blow open and role the safe Tuesday morning at 2 o'clock, it being just before payday, and the robbers knew that the safes of the merchants contained considerable money for the purpose of cashing checks.

A man by the name of Wm. Hanks, a Pinkerton detective, who was on the track of a man who committed a murder in Montana some years ago, happened to be in Delamar for the last three weeks, and he recognized Hugh Monroe by plugs in two front teeth of being a man who had committed crimes elsewhere, and got very friendly with him, and Monroe proposed to Hanks that he join in the robbery, which he willingly did. Hanks then notified Deputy Sheriff Henry Leach of the affair, and arrangements were made to capture all three of the parties, so at 12 o'clock Monday night Leach and another party entered Nesbitt's store, and setting back some little distance from where Hugh Monroe was to make his entrance through a window, and patiently awaited the coming of the gentleman.

Shortly after 2 o'clock the iron shutters were quietly heard to swing and some person was heard to jump from the window on the floor, when one of the parties in the store, it being very dark, arose, and seeing the mere shadow of the upper part of a man, the rest of the person being protected by a panneling around the office, fired a shot at it, when a yell went up "Oh! my God, oh! oh! oh my! Bill oh Bill." Then there was a sound as though the man's body had fallen on the floor and those in the store thought the man had been killed. Leach then run out the front of the store to assist in capturing Mrs. Monroe, who was dressed in men's clothes, and Frank Sanford who were on the outside watching for the approach of any person.

It appears that Monroe was not hurt any by the shot, there being only a slight mark on his hand, which was bleeding, as though a buckshot had plowed along it, when he was captured, he having crawled through the window. The woman was also captured, but Sanford had disappeared, and on searching his house, could not be found, but about 5 o'clock the Company assaser came over from the office and stated that Sanford was over there, when one of the officers and another party went over to see him.

Deputy Sheriff Monohan of Caliente went down to Delamar on Monday and assisted in the capture of the safe-crackers.

After the jailing of Monroe and wife, and about 4 o'clock Detective Hanks proposed to go and capture his man, who went by the name of Pete Hansen, who was known by a scar on his kind. Hansens correct name is Green.

Frank Sanford is a young married man and has been working in the Bamberger-Delamar Company assay office for the last two years and a half and has heretofore born a good reputation but for the last year or so has taken to drinking and gambling and is a person easily lead.

About two weeks ago Monroe went to work in the assay office, where he became intimate with Sanford and prevailed on him to join him in the robbery to be made.

Monroe and wife are professional robbers and there were several jobs planned to rob, places in Delamar.

The prisoners were all brought to Pioche and lodged in jail Wednesday night.

Mrs. Monroe or Miss Monticelli is of a slender build, weighs about 100 pounds, five feet four inches in height, dark olive complexion, black hair and eyes, when seen at the jail Wednesday she was attired in a man's black cutaway sack suit, fadora hat, hair cut short and if seen on the street would be passed for a man. She while in Salt Lake on her way to Delamar to join her confederates, told the following story to a Herald Reporter:

Nello Monticelli, an Italian girl 23 years of age, known at her parents' ranch near Montrose Colo., as "Nell, the Cowboy," was arrested at midnight Thursday by Detectives Wheeling and Rhodes, just as she boarded the Salt Lake route train for the gold fields of Nevada on a prospecting trip. The Salt Lake Hardware company had sold her ten pounds of dynamite and refusing to express it, she packed it in her grip. The police were notified and the young woman was detained in the city jail last night.

Her story of a prospecting trip through the deserts of Nevada that she had planned was told to the officers, and after she had expressed the dynamite to Delamar she was released.

Miss Monticelli left last night for Bullfrog, where she will search for a fortune.

When she arrives there she has planned to throw away her tangle skirts and don a suit of men's corduroy clothes. Wearing high top-boots, a flannel shirt, two six-shooters strapped to her belt, and a broad-brimmed white hat, she will launch out into the desert wastes to battle with thirst, hunger and hardships for gold.

This will not be the first time that she has worn men's clothes or crossed a desert. The sun-scorched plains of Arizona and New Mexico failed to baffle her. She rode the deserts over for three months' where at times thirst and hunger were flaunted in her face. She could speak the language of the Mexican, and once when she strayed away into the hills this saved her life.

Her mining experiences also are varied. In Colorado, where she lived until her father's death she visited the mines. In her wild rides she met many prospecting parties. She has set off blast, drilled single-handed and been to the bottom of the deepest mines in that state. With this practical experience she believes that she can go through the deserts of Nevada and fight with men for claims. If fortune smiles on her in Nevada she intends to take a trip to sunny Italy, where she was born.

Miss Monticelli has about $200, and can get more to take her on her prospecting trip. At Delamar she intends to buy a pack of provisions. With two burros and an Indian pony she intends to go out in the neighborhood of the rich strikes and establish a camp, where she can obtain water. From there she will prospect in an unknown country.

"I loved my Colorado home, where I was raised on a ranch near Montrose," she said yesterday. "When my father died three years ago my mother and sisters and brothers moved east, having sold the old ranch.

They could not keep me peened up in a city. I longed to straddle a horse and take to the mountains up hill and down dale. The life had too many pleasures out west to live in a hot, congested city, and I broke away. My mother has oftentimes sent me money, and I always write to them of my latest experiences. For three years I have roamed about the wild west and have traveled about considerably. I have often found it necessary to put on men's cloths to make my way but that's nothing.

When I left my home in the east I came back to the Montrose ranch where I was raised.

When a little girl I learned to ride a horse and wear men's clothes. For ten years I rode those hills over. I have two six-shooters in my trunk now which my father gave to me. With those buckled to my belt and a

.300 Savage strapped to my saddle I have hunted with the ranchmen. I killed big game, and can ride anything that you can get in a corral. Less than three years ago I rode a horse no man in Montrose dared tackle.

"Since I came out west three years ago I have made three trips One summer I went to Arizona, New Mexico and through California, returning to Chicago.

The next summer I went through Colorado, Wyoming and Montana. I also made another short trip last summer I had planned this Nevada trip some months ago and think that I will be successful. If I am not, in three or four months I will return to Montrose and the winter, but if I am I will go to Italy, where I was born, but from where my parents brought me to this country when a baby.

"During my experiences in my tramps I have been a waitress, a bookkeeper and a teacher of music. This is the first time I have ever been locked in jail, but it was a mistake. It was a good experience for one like myself who knocks about the country, but I don't believe I am any the worse for it.

"I passed through a high school course in which I took bookkeeping. Later I studied music and have enjoyed it very much. Since my father died the family has been broken up and scattered, but the life I learned to love on the ranch clings with me and I can't drop it. This trip I realize, is a dangerous one, but I have attempted to take it, and I am going to see it through."
